We(re) Here is an open studio exhibition introducing the work of two new design practices. Thomas Leinberger and Program Studio, working respectively in furniture and graphic design, will show recent collaborative and individual pieces.

Thomas Leinberger is a furniture and product designer. His work investigates material and context with an organic process that encourages us to experience the seemingly banal from a nuanced perspective. Program Studio is a graphic design studio whose work removes stylistic visual cues in design and typography, enabling the viewer to interpret the content directly. Together, the studios share not only physical space but an intrinsic enjoyment of the design process and respect for the history of these two disciplines. With We(re) Here, the two design practices will be examining texture and context through furniture, objects, textiles and typography.
